

NATIONAL MARINE LIFE CENTER

Caring for Stranded Marine Animals

About NMLC

Cape Cod is a global stranding hotspot! Hundreds of sick and injured marine animals strand here every year. The National Marine Life Center is a non-profit marine animal hospital. We rehabilitate stranded sea turtles, seals, dolphins, porpoises and small whales for release back into the ocean. We advance the science of ocean ecosystems and work to improve human health care, too. Our Discovery Center shares what the animals teach us about the oceans and themselves. We bring children of all ages into the world of wildlife care through hands-on learning. Our Gift Shop offers a unique selection of environmentally friendly and locally produced items with a marine life theme.

We're Building a Hospital Today!

You can help raise walls, lay floors, build pools, equip operating rooms, run cables, install ducts and do all the things to make this hospital the best chance of survival for endangered marine animals. How can you help? A generous donation to Cape Cod's marine animal hospital.
